Dementia

Anita Earlie Schley

Dementia runs in my family. It is a frightening thing to see someone you love seemingly suddenly not remember someone or something significant and then to see that disease continue to take its toll. It's also terrible to see that person recognize that something is wrong or that this person is someone they should remember but don't. The older I get the more this disease hangs over my head. I'm terrified of it taking my mind and consequently my loved ones from my memory.

Quarantine Companion

Loni Newby

When faced with social distancing, some sought out toilet paper. I bought an electric guitar--No regrets.

Brigham City, Utah

Adaptable

Malory Beverly

We could learn a thing or two from the humble coyote's ability to adapt to and even thrive in harsh and changing environments.

Antelope Island, UT

Resilient

Malory Beverly

Bison are the epitome of resilience. No matter what challenges they have faced in their past, bison herds continue to thrive and conform to changing landscapes.
